3 Day Afyonkarahisar City Tour

Afyonkarahisar is a provincial city lying under an ancient castle – a particularly dramatic one atop a vertiginous rock, which had myriad occupants between Hittite and Ottoman times. Afyonkarahisar is home to a university but remains a workaday, conservative place, where the only noise at night comes from minarets and teahouses tuned into televised football matches. Despite its prosaic qualities, Afyonkarahisar has an attractive Ottoman quarter and some magnificent mosques befitting its long history. But it is 's role in the War of Independence, when Ataturk briefly made it his headquarters before routing the Greeks in the 1922 Battle of Dumlupinar, makes Turks proudest. Let there be no doubt in noting the giant statue in the main square (Hukumet Meydani) of a muscular man beating another into the ground.
